Personal Experience

For those who have just started their journey my name is Brayden Lawrence. I created this website as a project for my design class but I mainly created this website to provide a small guide for those who are just starting out. As someone who came into being gluten free without knowing much I would have loved a guide to give me whatever I needed. So, to help those who are like me, I decided to make this website.

I was diagnosed as celiac when I was 7 years old. Both me and my family struggled at first as we were so new to going gluten free. Luckily, with the help of lots of hours spent on research and lots of books purchased we managed to get used to the lifestyle. As of writing this on january 7th I am 14 years old and have lived with being celiac for 7 years now..

The image shows two instances of the Visual Studio Code (VS Code) interface, each displaying the same file: `styles.css`. The left instance is in Dark mode, and the right instance is in Light mode. Both instances show the same code content, which is a CSS file containing several class definitions.

The code defines four classes: `s9-2`, `s10-2`, `s11-2`, and `s12-2`. Each class has a background image, a border, and a specific width and height. The `s10-2` and `s11-2` classes have margins and an animation duration of 0.4 seconds. The `s10-2` and `s11-2` classes also have a `:hover` state that changes the background color to light grey. The `s12-2` class has a margin-left of 220px, while the others have 25px. The `s12-2` class also has a `:hover` state that changes the background color to light grey. The `/*` at the end of the file likely indicates a comment or a placeholder for further code.
